

Local Food Connection Proud Partner Holthouse Farms

ABOUT

Holthouse Farms is a fifth-generation family farm that has been selling produce for over 100 years. Holthouse's story begins in 1870, with Jan Holthouse immigrating to the United States from the Netherlands. He settled upon marshland in Northern Ohio and (as a true Dutchman!) converted it into a suitable and fertile produce farm. The fourth and fifth generations of the Holthouse family continue to run the farm today and have grown the business to sell produce both locally and to many major cities. By adding Doug Walcher Farms to the company in 2003, Holthouse Farms now provides a full profile of vegetables and continues to evolve to meet the challenges of an ever-changing food system.
